

AFTER THE PARTY

Richard Moore

He'd sworn off drink,
was on a diet.
What do you think?
Hard going. Try it.
Up stairs he huffed,
drunk and stuffed.

Found the wrong room
up the wrong stairs.
Let him entomb
his pains and cares.
Good man. Most days he don't act crazy.

With all that swilling,
you say, so prim,
he's only killing—
I know. Ask him.
Lots of, he'd sigh,
ways to die.
