

ALSO RAN!

Jim Barton

I read about a man who owns a racehorse that has never tasted victory at all;
he's run his horse in nearly ninety races,
then led him back, defeated, to his stall.

Yet, even in the throes of disappointment at another race to glory never won, he grooms his pride and joy and gets him ready for another chance at victory number one.

He and his horse are nearing their retirement;
he knows he might not ever see him win;
but love and faith and grim determination will make him hit the starting gate again.

A road is just a dream unless it's driven;
you'll never reach your goal by standing still;
and love is just a word until it's given;
pour out your heart, or it will never fill.

"Also Ran!" © 2006 by Jim Barton

Contemporary Rhyme Vol. 3 No. 2 Spring 2006