

AT THE GRAVE OF A SMALL GIRL

Norma Bates

She's turned away from hills and stars
And pretty angel roses,
For each of them a goblin mars—
And softly decomposes.

Now at last she joys to lie
Within the lonesome earth,
Where she may sleep—as others cry—
And wait another birth.

“At The Grave Of A Small Girl” © 2004 by Norma Bates