

ELECTORAL POST MORTEM

Vi Ransel

It's a rainy day in America.
Time to call off the parade.
Fifty-one percent of The People decided to continue the crusade to make the world an American playground and escalate the War on the Poor to befoul the air and the waters by dumping more of the same load of manure.

But any Greening of America will necessarily be delayed since the administration's declared there's still more war to be waged.

To make our Beloved Country safe for tax traitors, oil lords, callous rich and let corporations continue to run our country into the ditch.

To continue the pursuit of profit from which "free enterprise" creates a cultural cesspool allowing CEOs to live high on the hog using material greed as their gospel.

To make sure no children are educated here, but they'll all pass the standardized tests.
The ignorance of the "serve us" economy's wage slaves is the cornerstone on which this fraud rests.

Thus the electorate knows little history but the majority all belong to the Church of the Hypocrisy of Self-righteous Judgment.
It's time for God to start scorching the earth.

To deliver the American people from those who mock Jesus' teachings as those of a fool by fighting to display the Ten Commandments while breaking the Golden Rule.

Now Jesus was never a cowboy and certainly not The Terminator.

His message was, and is, one of love, except perhaps for the money changers.

And rather than support an administration which creates more rich by creating more poor, the next time you find yourself privileged to vote ask yourself what it is Jesus would do.

“Electoral Post Mortem” © 2005 by Vi Ransel