

MATTHEW 10:29-31

Laura Heidy

If God still sees when sparrows fall then why are cats so sharp of claw?
I would have thought that God turned pale each time He spied a twitching tail or heard a kitten caterwaul...

It somehow casts a somber pall to think the God who made us all has let this sort of thing prevail.
If God still sees

beneath each tree, behind each wall, then why do stray cats stalk and maul the frightened finch and quaking quail?
It makes me wonder without fail each time the kittens crouch and crawl
if God still sees.

“Matthew 10:29-31” © 2005 by Laura Heidy